

38th SEMINAR ON RECENT ADVANCES IN ANIMAL HEALTH & PRODUCTION

INTRODUCTION

There could not have been a more exciting time for the field of veterinary medicine. The veterinary profession has grown and advanced by leaps and bounds in the last decade. We now have a much better understanding of disease and disease processes and are able to apply this to further improve our livestock industry. As our knowledge and expertise in various aspects of animal health and production has expanded, so has our contribution to the global community as a whole. Veterinarians are now more than ever involved in various key positions in society and play a critical role in food safety and public health. We are the providers of advanced animal health care with state-of-the-art diagnostics and are also heavily involved in ground breaking research that has put veterinarians on the map. This seminar aims to introduce veterinarians, scientists and members of the health profession that highlights latest research development in animal health and production. The Faculty of Veterinary Medicine takes great pleasure in organizing this seminar and cordially invites you to the 38th Recent Advances in Animal Health and Production.
